

Scenario Title

A club/organization at a university needs a way to gather more students in the local area to come to their meetings.

Actor

The scenario is centered around the club leader trying to find a way on spreading the word on their organization's existence. The leader is in charge of running the club and maintaining its members. This also includes bringing new members to help grow the club in size.

Setting

This scenario takes place at a university's clubs and organizations. These are groups of students who gather with similar interests to commune on activities. Each club/organization is different in size and scale, but all need members to flourish and continue to receive support. The more support a club receives the better the chances of longevity and popularity of it.

Scenario Goal

The organizer is trying to outsource their club's name to as many students as possible. They need to do this by and none to low-cost method. It also needs to be assessable to as many people as possible while also being easy to access. By doing this it should give the ability to more incoming students to find a club they may be interested in.

Scenario Narrative

As it currently stands the pandemic has made it even more difficult for students to interact with each other. This especially is known to fact when clubs new or old are eagerly trying to find more members to increase well known activity. The issue comes from finding new ways to grab students interests in a club's involvement. By introducing new ways to find these clubs it could increase student productive around campus allowing for a new regrowth of student engagement. Clubs need to have ways to reach out to others otherwise their idea of as a group would not function. To solve this problem club leaders will have to look for a way to advertise their clubs' description and location for students/ By also giving times and up to date events for people it could adjust it for their own scudule to see if the organizations time window even works for them. To accomplish these feats could give a university club's most effective way possible at this time to outsource involvement in groups to help everyone grow closer as a whole. This can be done through a new source of technology that can allow users to group together in quick session.